

Local Lines.

Mr. Dennis is running a regular stage and mail line to Ft. McDowell.

Mr. F. A. Shaw has moved out on his ranch, just outside the western limits of the town.

The U. S. A. paymaster, Maj. W. E. Greary, has just dealt out the greenbacks to the "boys" at Yuma.

We are informed by our worthy P. M. that the thermometer was as low as 22 degrees yesterday morning and down to 38 degrees this morning.

The restaurant furniture of the Mint Restaurant was sold at auction this afternoon. Mrs. Millap goes out of business on account of ill health.

North Wilcox, of McDowell, has been spending the week in town, endeavoring to recover some horses belonging to him which were driven off and sold to parties in this place.

The Prescott papers are decidedly touchy on the Capital question. The Miner of the 16th inst. jumps into it with a club, cowhide boots and a yell of "Shut up, down there ye blathering spalpeens, and talk of something sensible now, such as wisdom and statesmanship and pumpkins, but niver ye open yer gob about the capital forever the result of a sectioner feud."

The Black Canyon stage, due here at 2 o'clock this afternoon, was delayed on account of a mishap, which occurred about seven miles from town. While coming down a steep grade the coach upset, spilling out the passengers and smashing things generally, but hurting no one seriously. Jim Wagner, the driver, had his face scraped and received some bruises.

The stages are carrying heavy loads of passengers almost every trip.

Mr. J. Byers, some time ago reported killed by the Indians in the southern part of the Territory, is in town without a scratch or scar, even.

Mr. Shriver pronounces the Castle Creek prospect as one of the finest in the Territory. The indications at the famous Clifton copper mines were not near so fair as those now being opened up in the Castle Creek country.

The official count of the votes of the last election proceeds but slowly, but one precinct, Phoenix, having been disposed of at 2 o'clock P. M. The members for the precinct remain unchanged.

He who advertises is he who makes the money. Hundreds of people are directed to your business through your advertisement in your town paper that would go elsewhere had they not been apprised of the character of your business through the newspaper.

Judge Porter, Messrs. Smith and Logan, of New York, and Mr. Campbell, of Toronto, left yesterday forenoon for the Basin on a mining expedition and to inspect mines in which the New York gentlemen are largely interested. They will return in about ten days.

The old Tiger mine, in the northern part of the Bradshaw country, which was worked a few days ago as being reopened and promising well, has since then presented its owners a rich strike. Samples of ore show native silver and assay $400 per ton. The company has opened a chimney of ore 6 feet wide and 150 feet long.

A cloudy day; a fine thing in Arizona, therefore remarkable.

A note from ex-Secretary Gosper is mailed from the Palmer House, Chicago.

A Territorial legislator is overwhelmed with applications for petty offices, and usually has more trouble on his hands about this time than a hog drover.

Mr. Geo. Hamlin showed us this morning a lot of fine young horses which he has at his stables for sale. One span of iron greys especially are very fine looking fellows, and would make a handsome buggy team.

The candidates were standing around most of yesterday awaiting the action of the Board of Supervisors in counting the vote of the county. The vote was so close that few of them were certain as to their ultimate fate.

The San Bernardino Valley, in California, is reported as settling up at the rate of twenty families per month. The Salt River Valley, which is similarly though more favorably located, should be settling up just as rapidly, provided our county affairs were favorable, and a railroad through the valley to make it accessible to the outside world.

This morning's experience is an other hint to our citizens that it is time that a fire company should be formed and thoroughly equipped. The town is large enough to have a hook and ladder company and a Babcock company. We presume, however, that the apathy and carelessness of the past will continue. Phoenix is not particularly religious, but there is a great deal of trouble in the L. L. I.

MINING ENTHUSIAST.

Phoenix Welcomes Capitalists to the Treasures of Her Surrounding Mountains.

On last Saturday evening a serene moon was tendered at the Bank Exchange to Messrs. Walter Logan, Chas. R. Smith, of New York, and a Mr. Smith, of Cincinnati, who, during the past two years, have displayed commendable energy and enterprise in the development of the Tonto Basin mining properties. After the rendition of several selections by the band, the gentlemen appeared and were introduced by Judge Porter in a few appropriate remarks. In thanking the people of Phoenix for the compliment bestowed,

MR. WALTER LOGAN, to whom the country adjacent to the town of Logan, in Tonto Basin, is so much indebted, said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I desire to thank you for the very delicate compliment which you and Judge Porter have paid to me and my friends who are here tonight on a visit, having been invited by Judge Porter to look at certain mining interests in which we have interested ourselves in the past. I came here last summer and spent a few weeks in your Territory and I carried back with me such glowing accounts of Arizona, of this fertile valley, that surrounds Phoenix, of the mineral wealth in your mountains, of your hospitable sons and beautiful daughters, that, although I am considered a man of veracity in my own country, my friends regarded me as a lunatic and have now sent out two gentlemen to report on my sanity. As far as I have been able to judge, however, from their faces and words, I think the story they will tell on their return will so far exceed mine as to specify acquire me of any charges of insanity or want of veracity. I have a good deal of faith in Arizona. I have seen a here about Phoenix as fine a country as Providence, in its kindness, makes. I have seen your citizens and experienced their kindness and hospitality and I have made the acquaintance of your old citizen, Judge Porter. I came here for the purpose of making his acquaintance, and I found that the righteousness of his decisions were only equalled by the eloquence of his speeches when a candidate for Congress. I believe that this Territory of yours is destined to be a grand and glorious State, a wealthy and prosperous State, and I expect when one more star shall be added to our glorious flag for the State of Arizona, that our old friend Judge Porter, if he reforms and becomes a good Democrat, will take his seat in the Senate chamber, perhaps in one of the seats that have been occupied by Clay, Calhoun, or Webster, and that he will occupy that position with the dignity of his predecessors. Gentlemen, if any of you should ever come to New York and visit me at 61 Wall Street, I may not recognize your faces, but if you will tell me you are from Phoenix, you will find me a friend.

Mr. Logan's remarks were greeted with the heartiest applause, and in response to numerous calls,

MR. CHAS. R. SMITH, of New York, spoke as follows: LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I feel that my friend Mr. Logan has very well expressed my own feelings here tonight that there is scarcely anything that I can say. I feel sincere and grateful to you all, and to Judge Porter for this kindness. The next thing after your mineral wealth is your remarkable hospitality. I have, I think, been asked to take a drink nearly a hundred times today, but I didn't take them all—it was impossible. Your hospitality, I feel certain, is of the sincerest sort, with nothing said or formal about it, it comes from the heart, and I thank you all for the kindness shown me here tonight, and I can assure you that I will always in after life look back to it with pleasure and gratification.

On the conclusion of Mr. Smith's remarks, JUDGE PORTER appeared in response to appeals from the crowd for a "speech," and delivered the following address:

MY FRIENDS—I thank you for thus having welcomed my friends, who are men who not only represent ideas, but capital. I am here this evening not to deliver a speech, but to deliver a political speech, recognizing as I do that the day for that has passed. I feel like thanking all my friends for their confidence and support, and I recognize this proposition that I am not like some historical personages of the past—that after me is the deluge. I feel that I am a co-worker with every man in Arizona who endeavors to make it better and truer. I have worked and labored for that object long, and being conscious of that fact, I have felt that I was entitled to and should receive the earnest support of my own people. When I say my own, I mean those for whom I have labored most earnestly, and yet I have no feeling of bitterness against any, knowing how many animosities and interests enter into a political conflict. Whether I win or lose I am still an Arizonian. It is where my interests lie and out of the crucible I have discovered wealth, wealth and resources never dreamed of before. I have found broad valleys where tossing horns and herded flocks of sheep were unknown before. I have heard the hum of mills where before had been unexplored forests until a recent day, where lumber and shingles are made. I have found a wealth that is located in our mines, hidden there since the stars sang together. But a few months ago there was discovered in the East a cavern in which were deposited the mummified remains of many members of a dynasty of beings and queens, princes and princesses—the true existence of which was known by the faintest tradition—wrapped in their burial garments with gums and spices and myrrh; holding in their withered hands the parchment illuminated and embossed, from the deciphering of which might be learned their age and station; with funeral jewels of the fine gold and the most precious gems, shaped into forms emblematic of their faith in life, or in that country from which no traveler returns. Sleeping on until the dust of centuries had drifted over their graves—unknown and forgotten, until even the statute of limitations had run against the resting places of the dead; and when their sanctuaries were broken, their ghastly graves, hideous in all their forms, with its mouldering burial cases and its unmeasured became merchandise to enrich museums, and their jewelry contributed by the band of loaves became a contribution that attracted the curious, or by its form furnished new models for the goldsmith's art. So in our own land are caverns, many of them yet undiscovered by man. And it has been no wandering Bedouin of the desert who has pointed out the way, but the prospector, faithful to the symbols of his order, following float of fragmentary rock until in the fullness of his faith he has struck his hammer, and said, here was the portal of unexplored and unmeasured wealth. Then has come the miner with the drill, with the hammer, with the fuse and with the powder opening up the avenue to that which was hidden and unknown. Then has come the man of wealth, making honest and judicious investments, re-suiting in that mine of re-sounding stamps that every mining camp so loves to hear, with the molten flow of smouldering furnaces that is liquid wealth, and out of it all—mines and furnaces and broad fields—comes the wealth that we believe will sometimes result in what is the question we must ask ourselves, and in which we must believe and act. For our own part we believe that it means more than we dream of in our weak philosophy. We believe that it means a State—not a Rhode Island or a Massachusetts, but a State with resources that will not put it at the foot, but a State out of which its citizens will carry fortunes, by the side of which fortunes of other men will grow pale, and out of its bosom will be born a race of men with an energy and perseverance that will make a mighty tribe of men among the citizens of the nation to which we belong.

During his address, Judge Porter was interrupted by frequent applause, and on its conclusion was followed by Judge Ivy Cook, Hon. C. A. Luke, and several other representative mining men.

Telegraphic Colorification.

[From Tuesday's Daily]

This morning about four o'clock a bright light in the telegraph office attracted the attention of some one on the street, and upon examination, the interior of the office was found to be on fire. An alarm was at once given, and help arriving, the door was broken open and a line of buckets poured water upon the flames which were licking up the sides of the wall to nearly the ceiling. The floor had caught from the fireplace, and from that a desk of books and papers that stood near had caught and was entirely consumed. The heat has been intense, as the furniture is charred in some places and paint scaling off, and papers, books, etc., are burned and the exposed portions charred to ashes. A fine permanent piece of work hung upon the wall above the desk that burned was of course completely destroyed, and the indicator of the weather vane badly defaced. The loss to the government will probably be about $100. The building is owned by Mr. Patton, and was insured. Perhaps $75 will cover the damage to the building. The adobe walls and a heavy calomined cloth ceiling saved the surrounding wood-work and roof. A few minutes more would have sufficed to set the roof on fire, when a general conflagration must have ensued, as there are considerable wood buildings in the immediate vicinity.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

Canvass of Election Returns.

PHOENIX, Nov. 20, 1893. Board met as required by law—present, Gregg, Henshaw and Wormser—for canvass of election returns. The vote at the following precincts was then canvassed: Phoenix, Tempe, Mesa, City, McDowell, Cave Creek, Wickenburg, Seymour, Valley, and Gila Bend. On reaching Agua Caliente the canvass was objected to by attorneys for R. F. Kirkland. The Board, however, counted them, and adjourned to 10 o'clock on Tuesday.

PHOENIX, Nov. 21, 1893.

Board met pursuant to adjournment; present, John L. Gregg, A. L. Henshaw, M. Wormser and clerk, F. Cox. Board proceeded to the canvass of election returns. Web precinct, eight votes cast; Verde precinct, six votes cast; Agua Caliente, Campbell and Tweed appeared and objected to the canvass of the vote of this precinct on behalf of R. F. Kirkland, for the following reason:

That from said precinct it does not appear that the Poll List, as required by Sec. 19, Chap. 24, has been kept at said precinct. It does not appear from said returns that the voters' names tallied were really cast at said election precinct. The returns do not appear to have been delivered to the Board of Supervisors by either of the officers at the election in said precinct. The affidavit required by law does not appear with said returns. The certificate of the postmaster as required by law is not indorsed on said returns. There is no return from said precinct which shows that any persons voting in said precinct has his name on the Great Register of this county. Judge Adams answered on behalf of Osborn.

Board, on motion of A. L. Henshaw, proceeded to canvass the vote from Agua Caliente, and found that 11 votes had been cast. [Vote shown in table.—Ed.] The canvass of the several precincts being then completed, the board then proceeded to look up returns, which, at the hour of going to press, were incomplete.

Ten cowboys contested for a silver, trimmed saddle worth $300, to be given to him who roped, threw and tied down a steer in the shortest space of time. The winner accomplished the feat in one minute and forty-five seconds.

The nice young man who swindled the confiding young ladies of Tucson out of considerable money a short time ago, taking orders for shoes that he never intended to deliver, and getting cash in advance, has turned up in the northern counties of California, where he is doing a land office business. He talks so glibly that confiding young ladies are obliged to yield to his blandishments and allow themselves to be swindled.

Quite a distressing accident occurred near York's ranch, in Graham County, on Wednesday. As Messrs. Bolan, Franklin, Salmon and Baldo were riding in the mail coach to that place, the vehicle upset, causing internal injuries to Mr. Salcido and breaking one of his arms in two places. Medical aid was procured and he was made comfortable and left at York's, the remainder of the party continuing their journey on the following day.

It is a mistake to suppose that in consequence of the assignment of P. W. Smith & Co. work is suspended in Winchester district. Much ore is sacked awaiting transportation to the mill, and the showing for a big mine in that district is as good as over. Those mines are now in the hands of J. B. Haggin and George Hearst, which goes to prove that in the near future they will be made to prove what they are, and the assays made to show that they are well worth the price paid for them. The Earls, of Winchester property, is one of the most promising localities in the district.

The Southern Pacific railroad company is endeavoring to purchase an interest in the Sonora railroad from the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe company. The proposition is worthy of the company. It is sharp and far reaching in its results, as the company would virtually command every seaport of California and the southwest wherever they are opened to communication with the interior.

Dr. J. Pool, formerly an extensive sugar cane raiser of California, has been trying his hand in the same direction on the Santa Cruz bottoms opposite the town, and has succeeded in raising a much heavier crop than previous experience in California had led him to believe possible. In that State under the most favorable circumstances, fifteen tons of Honduras cane to the acre was considered a large crop. Here at the first planting and with less care, the yield has averaged twenty tons to the acre. From the six acres planted the return has been 120 tons of cane, out of which Mr. Pool expects to make 2,000 gallons of syrup. At an expense of $450 he has fitted up for its manufacture in first-class style. His mill, one of the Forest Crown make was ordered through Mr. W. E. Stevens, and was also his clarifying boiler and evaporating pans. The syrup will wholesale at about one dollar per gallon, and will no doubt meet with ready sale. Now that Mr. Pool has seen the productiveness of Arizona soil, he will plant more largely the coming year.—Citizen.

An invasion of Asiatic cholera from Egypt and India is apprehended in Europe, and French statisticians are prompted to recall the devastations inflicted by the pest in Paris in previous epidemics of the present century. In 1832 there were 12,700 deaths in the great city in the one month of April. The epidemic lasted altogether 139 days, and called for a total of 18,402 victims. At that time the population of Paris was only 545,000. In 1842 there was an epidemic that lasted nine months, and carried off 16,165 persons. In 1853 the cholera caused the death of 9,316 victims, and in 1892 there was a death toll of 12,000. During each of these epidemics there was great mortality also in the rest of France and it is not strange, therefore, that the present reports of another approaching epidemic are received with much uneasiness.

Upon entering the canyon which leads to Fort Huachuca, the road passes close to the soldiers burial ground. There the old veteran, after years of devotion, hardship and danger in the service of his country, is laid lovingly down to rest by his comrades in arms. There, by the base of the grand old Huachuca, which stand as a monument to the nation's dead, sleep side by side the brave defenders of our country. Their battles are over. In peaceful slumber they will rest until aroused by the last bugle call. All honors to the boys who wore the blue.—Ex.
